DIAMOND BACCARAT

As with many casino games, Baccarat has several flavors, including Chemin-de-fer, Mini Baccarat, Super Pan 9, Baccarat en Banque, and Punto Banco. The object is to draw a hand with total points closest to nine. Although the elegant game can appear quite serious, it's really as simple as betting on the flip of a coin. The game is driven by an automated, electromechanical "dealer" using real cards to simulate a live game without any assistance from a croupier. A video version using randomly selected virtual cards is also available as well as a semi-automated "Dealer Assist" version where a croupier deals the cards.

THREE WAYS TO PLAY

Different jurisdictions often have different regulations regarding the types of gaming operations allowed. Diamond Baccarat offers several modes of operation so you can comply with local standards:

- Automated — A fully automated, full-featured version of Diamond Baccarat fits neatly in any casino or gaming hall, and is especially useful in venues where live, dealer-operated table games are not allowed.
- Video — A software generator drives the video version of Diamond Baccarat, with computer-generated animation shown on an LCD display. No human assistance is required for simulating the traditional table game.
- Dealer Assist — Dealer Assist Diamond Baccarat (semi-automated) allows players to place wagers through individual Play Stations while the game play is conducted using a live card-dealing table that includes an LCD display for the croupier and a video camera for recording the dealt cards. Table is available in standalone version.
